

BACK TO YOUR ROOTS Caruck fave Roots has always combined the environmentally friendly with the über-trendy. Green consciousness is incorporated into stylish, biodegradable, vegetable-tanned leather bags. Zerum-leather bag, $359.

FASHION

MINDFUL STYLE From the people who brought you Lululemon, Ooqo's line—from tees to jeans—showcases what can be done with organic and sustainable materials. Fabrics used are made from soy, hemp, bamboo, organic cotton and merino wool, as well as polyester made from recycled bottles. Organic-cotton/spandex denim jean, $195.

TREAD LIGHTLY New shoe line Charmoné delivers animal-safe, eco-friendly, sweatshop-free, altogether fabulous designs. Spotted on the gamine game of A-listers such as Natalie Portman, the vegan footwear line is made with recycled materials, water-based glues and nickel-free hardware in its production. Microfibre faux-leather shoes, approximately $355.

NATURAL ORDER

Calgary-born cutie Danielle Pittman creates a stunning collection of jewelry that is inspired by nature. The little luxuries are handmade with 18-karat gold, recycled metals and found glass. 18-karat-gold/recycled-glass necklace, $769. For where-to-buy, see Stylesource.

NATURE'S ARCHITECT Based out of Vancouver, designer Hajnalka Mandula's sophisticated collection is inspired by nature but doesn't cost the earth. Mandula's handmade designs incorporate natural elements such as cotton, wool, hemp and even coffee. Wool tweed coat with hand-carved bone-closure, $825.

CROC STAR Lacoste's new limited-edition Eco Polo, $160, is made from organic cotton and natural indigo dye and is packaged in a special embossed box designed from recycled materials.

STELLAR STYLE Stella McCartney's high-fashion label maintains luxury without compromising on ethics. All of her clothes are free of animal products, including the new accessories line, made with materials derived from plants. Faux-leather bag, approximately $1,115.